H₂O

St. Petersburg's first international public art project is being launched during the first two weeks in September with the exhibition H2O: Nordic and Russian Art in Public Spaces. Leading artists from Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and St. Petersburg will participate in this exhibition dedicated to the theme of water at the Peter and Paul Fortress which promises to be one of the largest and most wide-reaching public events this autumn. Attracting the attention of St. Petersburg residents of all ages as well as contemporary art enthusiasts and out-of-town guests, interactive objects, video installations, light projections and sculptures, all elucidating the theme of water in different ways, will be shown during the project turning the area surrounding the historic centre of the city into a virtual paradise for art-lovers.
